NEW Valeo Climfill® air conditioning servicing stations

Whatever your experience of air conditioning servicing, Valeo's new 2015 range of refill stations will fit the bill!

ClimFill® Maxi is ideal for larger air conditioning systems in trucks and buses. It offers a SuperCharge mode specifically for commercial vehicle air conditioning circuits. The Maxi utilises the eco-patented ClimFill® Lock coupler system to improve recovery cycle time and avoid refrigerant release into the atmosphere when decoupling. Maxi also boasts a colour LCD touch screen.

With a fuel tank capacity of 32kg, vacuum pump speed of 167 litres/minute and 4.5 metre service hose extensions, ClimFill® Maxi is one of the best specified in the market. In line with the rest of the range, ClimFill® Maxi is fully automatic to minimise the work for the mechanic.

For LCV and cars, ClimFill® Easy is the perfect entry level solution for garages moving into air conditioning servicing, while ClimFill® Pro is the most advanced refill station available in the marketplace. The Pro station can be adapted for HFO gases with a conversion kit. ClimFill® Pro HFO is a dedicated HFO-1234yf station.

Call your local branch to discuss your air conditioning servicing needs and which of the ClimFill® range best suits them.

WABCO Poster

A handy guide to truck and trailer parts is included (loose) in this issue of CV Smart Choice, courtesy of WABCO. An excellent source for product identification and part location the first three digits of the WABCO part number are given.

The poster highlights the extensive range of OE product that WABCO supply to major European truck & trailer vehicle manufacturers. WABCO is the No.1 global supplier of technologies and control systems for safe, efficient commercial vehicles. From concepts to finished products and beyond, WABCO have been developing these innovative systems since 1869.

Today, with an unbeatable list of industry firsts behind them, WABCO continues to develop pioneering mechanical, mechatronic and electronic technologies for braking, stability and transmission automation systems for the world's commercial truck, bus and trailer manufacturers. Sales were $2.9 billion in 2014.

If you haven't already, find a space on your wall for the poster and call your local branch to place your orders.

New EU rules will impact CV servicing & repairs

March saw the European Parliament give final approval to new EU rules for safer and more eco-friendly lorries (Directive 2013/0195).

These rules will allow VMs to develop more aerodynamic lorries reducing fuel consumption by 7%-10%, cutting greenhouse gas emissions and enhancing road safety.

"Final backing by the European Parliament... takes us one step closer to having better lorries on our roads," said EU Commissioner for Transport, Violeta Bulc.

"It will allow the industry to produce new lorries and to remain competitive on the global market.

"The vote paves the way for Member States to reach a final agreement, so that society can start to reap the benefits of these new rules."

Fleet owners, operators and the independent aftermarket can expect a raft of exciting new technological developments as VMs work with suppliers to meet the new Directive.

IAAF cite eCall as a key threat to the aftermarket, as VMs move to route vehicle information through their servers

The commercial vehicle independent aftermarket faces a wide range of threats that the IAAF is fighting, across many fronts. Each could have devastating consequences for the aftermarket trade by restricting customer choices.

Possibly the most serious of these threats, currently, is arising from eCall - a European initiative to bring rapid assistance to motorists involved in a collision anywhere in the European Union. At the end of 2014 the EU formally approved legislation for eCall to be included as standard in all new type approved vehicles from April 2018.

The threat arises from the necessity for VMs to incorporate eCall into their models, which will require the presence of vehicle telematics (the platform to deliver eCall) in all vehicles. These telematics will allow VMs to introduce the 'extended vehicle' concept.

'Extended vehicle' means access to all data and information would be routed through VMs' servers, rendering aftermarket operators unable to communicate directly with the vehicle.

The challenge for the independent aftermarket, and what the IAAF is fighting for, is to ensure independent operators have the following:

- Unmonitored remote communication with the vehicle
- Direct and continuous connectivity to the vehicle and its data
- Safe and secure connection

Watch this space for more on this important issue.

ECE R90 Approved Brake Discs

WINNARD - manufacturing brake discs since 1965

Our extensive (and growing) range of ECE R90 approved braking products is available from your local branch

What is ECE R90?

ECE R90 is a European Standard which ensures compliance of brake pads, linings and (since 01/11/2014) brake discs, manufactured for the aftermarket for many commercial vehicles (categories M, N & O).

"Interchangeable parts" gain approval under these standards by undergoing tests to show that they perform to similar levels as the Original Equipment. Winnard braking products are "interchangeable", defined by the ECE R90 regulations as a replacement with the same interface dimensions as the original, but which may differ from the original in terms of design, material composition and mechanical properties.

The ECE R90 standard for brake discs requires dynamometer testing along with on-vehicle testing to include:

- geometric, material & balancing provision checks
- wear condition marking
- integrity tests (thermal & high load)
- service brake vehicle performance tests

European Member States determine individually whether & when to adopt UN ECE standards. R90 has been adopted thus far by Germany.

An ECE R90 standard for brake drums is anticipated later this decade.

From trusted solutions to new innovations

Tank Snake Prolongs Engine Life

Simply - Tank Snake uses new technology to separate water from fuel, in static and mobile fuel tanks.

Water can lead to severe and costly engine damage, causing the growth of algae, bacteria and fungus in diesel leading to sludge formation. It is attracted by the ethanol in fuel and gets into the system via leaks, heating/cooling, condensation, etc.

Tank Snake prolongs an engine's life. Static Tank Snakes ensure whatever state your fuel arrives in, your fleet gets the cleanest fuel. Mobile Tank Snakes protect the fuel system in use. A 2ft Tank Snake absorbs up to 2 pints of water! Easy to remove from the tank, the diameter of a Tank Snake fully inflated with water is no more than 2 inches. Bear in mind that removal of a fully inflated Tank Snake is highly suggestive of more water in the fuel tank. Hang the Tank Snake in a dry environment for up to 4 hours and use it again, up to 10 times. We said it was simple!

Unlocking the mysteries of the Tank Snake

Detecting Fuel Contamination

WIX Diesel 4 in 1 Test Kits tell you within seconds whether fuel in a tank is contaminated. A simple swab detects 4 types of contamination (see Fig 1):

- diesel fuel oxidation, i.e. whether the diesel is fresh
- the presence of water in the fuel tank
- whether the fuel contains rust particles or sludge

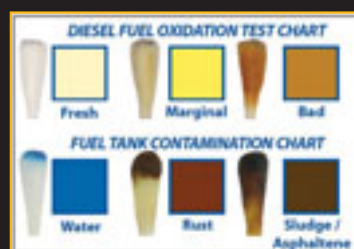

Fig 1
WIX Diesel 4 in 1 Test Kit detects four types of contamination

A simple test proves it

Don't take our word for it! Check out this test. Fig 2 shows two fuel samples; 'Tank A' is contaminated with water and 'Tank B' is pure fuel. As you can see, the water in the bottom of 'Tank A' has been identified by the blue tip on the test swab.

A Tank Snake is added to both samples. After just 24 hours the results are clear in Fig 3. The Tank Snake in 'Tank A' is gorged with water (suggesting there could be more water mixed in this fuel sample). The Tank Snake in 'Tank B' remains flaccid as there is no water to extract.

'Tank A' swab detects water

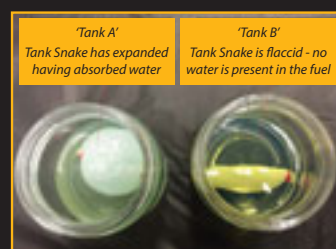

Fig 3
Gorged Tank Snake in 'Tank A' suggests more water to be removed

'Tank A' Tank Snake has expanded having absorbed water
'Tank B' Tank Snake is flaccid - no water is present in the fuel
